

BRAZIL

It is a country of many contrasts and of a fairy-tale natural wealth with so far unexplored primeval forests with endlessly long rivers, topical islands hemmed by exotic beaches and with amazing people, who surprise visitors by their inexhaustible energy, fantasy and playfulness. However, Brazil is also a country with an excellent and inexpensive cuisine, unexpected cleanness, order and relatively high safety. Nevertheless, it needs to be said that diving is still in diapers here. Diving bases have a weak promotion and they are difficult to be found. And when you find one, you cannot communicate with them, unless you speak Portuguese. Equipment of the bases is usually insufficient, old and very amortized, and the ships are historical fishing boats. Due to a small number of divers, however, many big animals can be seen under water. For example giant loggerheads, blue and hammerhead sharks and incredibly big pipers with magnificent sky-blue wings.

The most sought-after coastal touristic locality suitable for diving is the state Bahia with the capital city Salvador da Bahia. In this state, you can find touristic towns, in which there are beautiful beaches, crystal clear, shallow and safe water. There are also several natural reserves, the task of which is to protect local vegetation and life within it.
